Bio:

George Henderson works part-time as a medical science researcher, including researching for the authors of popular books on low-carbohydrate diets and fasting. He has had a long career as a musician, and though not a well-known (or over-exposed) one he has been interviewed by Kim Hill. At the age of 60 he is reasonably fit, enjoys walking the dog, running, and kayaking, reading, and listening to 19th and 20th century classical music. He has had only a little acting experience (most recently in student films and music videos), but does regular public presentations as a health volunteer and has patiently worked as an artist's model for sketch artists and photographers.
